Subject: Federal Lands: Information About Law Enforcement Activities

In response to your May 12, 1997, request, enclosure I provides information on each of the 19 questions you asked about law enforcement activities at four land management agencies: the Bureau of Land Management, the Fish and Wildlife Service, and the National Park Service within the Department of Interior and the Forest Service within the U.S. Department of Agriculture. Specifically, this report provides information on the number of employees involved in law enforcement activities, the costs associated with these activities, and the nature and extent of these activities.

We provided a draft of this report to the four agencies for their review and comment. The agencies generally agreed with the facts as presented in the report and provided several technical and editorial changes, which we incorporated into the report as appropriate.

As part of a separate request from the Chairman of the House Subcommittee on Crime, Committee on the Judiciary, GAO will be issuing a report on federal law enforcement. That report will review investigative authorities and personnel data at 32 federal organizations—including the Forest Service, the Bureau of Land Management and the Fish and Wildlife Service. When that report is issued later this month, we will forward copies to you.

We performed our work during June 1997 in accordance with generally accepted government auditing standards. In order to respond to your needs in the time frame requested, we obtained information from each of the four agencies that was readily available at the agencies' headquarters offices; we did not contact individual field offices to gather additional data. In some cases, certain data were not available at one or more of the agencies' headquarters. We did not independently verify the accuracy of the data we gathered.

As agreed with your offices, unless you publicly announce its contents earlier, we plan no further distribution of this report until 7 days from the date of this report. At that time, we will send copies of the report to the Secretaries of Agriculture and the Interior as well as the Chief of the Forest Service and the Directors of the Bureau of Land Management, the Fish and Wildlife Service, and the National Park Service. We will make copies of this report available to other interested parties upon request. Major contributors to this report include Cliff W. Fowler, Paul E. Staley, Jr., and Ned H. Woodward. If you have any questions or need additional information, please call me at (202) 512-8021.

INFORMATION ON LAW ENFORCEMENT ACTIVITIES IN THE BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT, FISH AND WILDLIFE SERVICE,
FOREST SERVICE, AND NATIONAL PARK SERVICE

Introduction: Except as noted, the following tables present information collected as of the end of fiscal year 1996. Also, within the Fish and Wildlife Service, there are two distinct law enforcement entities: (1) refuge law enforcement, which is responsible for law enforcement in refuges throughout the Fish and Wildlife Service, and (2) the Division of Law Enforcement, which is responsible for enforcing federal wildlife laws on and off of federal lands. Because of this distinction, we are reporting the two components separately. In addition, because of varying responsibilities, the data for the National Park Service are separated for law enforcement rangers and Park Police. Law enforcement rangers are responsible for law enforcement and protection activities in park units throughout the Park Service, while the Park Police are principally located in park units in and around Washington, D.C.; New York, New York; and San Francisco, California.

Question 1: How many uniformed law enforcement officers does each agency employ?

(For purposes of this report, "uniformed law enforcement officers" refers to law enforcement rangers and Park Police in the Park Service; law enforcement officers in the Forest Service and Bureau of Land Management (BLM); and refuge officers, wildlife inspectors, and a variety of other staff who have law enforcement as a collateral duty in the Fish and Wildlife Service. Generally, uniformed law enforcement officers perform and supervise a variety of duties that includes the protection of federal property and resources from natural or visitor-related depredation, the provision of safety and interpretive information to visitors, enforcement of laws and regulations, control of traffic and visitors' use of facilities, search and rescue operations, forest and structural fire control, and other duties.)

^a124 full-time-equivalent law enforcement officers (about 650 employees have collateral law enforcement duties, of which 53 are full time.)

^bThese are wildlife inspectors who work with Customs and U.S. Department of Agriculture inspectors in monitoring/halting illegal trade in wildlife and processing other importations of live wildlife. They do not have the authority to make arrests or carry firearms.

Question 2: How many special agents/investigators does each agency employ?

(Special agents/investigators are involved in planning and conducting investigations relating to alleged or suspected violations of criminal laws. These positions require a knowledge of such items as laws of evidence, criminal investigative techniques, rules of criminal procedure, court decisions concerning the admissibility of evidence, constitutional rights, search and seizure and related issues, and other criminal investigative skills.)

Question 7: How much does each agency spend in support of law enforcement personnel? (Break down these costs by airline and aircraft use; transportation of all types; training, equipment, special equipment; informant costs; office supplies; and all other costs associated with law enforcement in each of the agencies.)

Table I.7: Annual Costs to Support Law Enforcement Personnel

^bIncludes $2,042,960 for travel, $5,157,000 for support costs provided to regions and units (rent, computer use, telephone, radio dispatching services, etc.), $4,362,000 for fleet equipment (replacement and use costs), $2,500,000 for transfer of station costs, $1,730,257 for equipment and supplies, $836,000 for training, $500,000 for settlements and workers' compensation costs, $304,000 for headquarters assessment, $150,000 for special equipment (research/development), $100,000 for uniform replacement program, $5,000 for informant costs.

^cThe data provided in table I.3 show that the total cost of law enforcement in the Division of Refuges is $8,400,000, which includes all payroll, support, and other costs. (See footnote a on table I.3).

^dIncludes $3,477,057 for inspection services and contracts, $1,742,607 for supplies, $1,552,021 for equipment, $1,245,152 for travel, $524,196 for communications, $282,738 for transportation, $101,969 for unvouchered items (including the purchase of information and evidence), $97,037 for printing, $25,000 for buyout, $13,750 for construction, $6,965 for tort claims, and $255 for refunds including duplicative payments.

^eNot available.

^fWashington, D.C., office--$4,584,307; New York field office--$353,200; San Francisco office--$740,697. No further breakdown provided by agency.

Question 8: How many contracts or cooperative agreements does each agency have with other units of state and local government for them to do law enforcement work on federal lands?

^b$5,346,500 for cooperative patrol agreements and $1,741,000 for cooperative drug enforcement agreements.

^c$1,437,407 for contracts and $662,982 for cooperative agreements.

Question 10: During the past 5 years, how many cases has each agency requested the FBI to investigate, beginning with the initial infractions of the law?

This information is not collected by the agencies. However, the FBI is rarely involved in criminal investigations among the land management agencies. For example, during the past 5 years, BLM headquarters officials could recall only about nine occasions when the FBI was involved in its investigations. According to Park Police officials, no cases have been referred to the FBI during the last 5 years.

ENCLOSURE I

ENCLOSURE I

According to law enforcement officials in the Department of the Interior, the Department enjoys an excellent working relationship with the FBI. The FBI has primary jurisdiction for a number of crimes, including organized crime, financial crime, foreign counterintelligence, civil rights, and others. The FBI, by practice, does not routinely involve itself in the types of crimes handled by land management agencies. If and when an agency requests assistance for the FBI, according to law enforcement officials in Interior, the assistance is quickly forthcoming. The Interior agencies have primary jurisdiction for the majority of federal crimes which they investigate. By common practice, all Interior agencies conduct investigations for offenses committed on lands which they administer.

Question 11: During the past 5 years, how many cases did the FBI refuse to investigate that had been requested by the agency?

This information is not collected by the agencies. According to headquarters officials in each of the agencies, the FBI's assistance is rarely requested. However, when assistance is requested, the FBI has rarely refused to provide it. BLM officials recalled one occasion in the last 5 years when the FBI refused assistance. None of the other three agencies could recall any occasion in the past 5 years when the FBI refused to assist in an investigation.

Question 12: At what level in each agency is the decision made to request the assistance of the FBI?

Headquarters officials from each of the agencies indicated that generally the decision to request the assistance of the FBI would be made at the local level. The Chief of the U.S. Park Police, however, makes this decision for the Park Police.

Question 13: During the past 5 years, how many cases has each agency requested the Drug Enforcement Administration (DEA) to investigate, beginning with the initial infractions of the law?

Forest Service: No information is routinely collected by the agency on referrals to DEA. However, by a memorandum of understanding, DEA has, as a general rule, deferred to the Forest Service the investigative authority for violations occurring within National Forest System lands. The Forest Service keeps DEA informed of investigations that require investigative or enforcement powers outside the boundaries of the National Forest System.

Fish and Wildlife Service: According to Fish and Wildlife Service headquarters officials, no information is available on the number of referrals to DEA. Officials believed that there are very few referrals to DEA since drug cases are generally referred to local law enforcement authorities.

Park Service: According to Park Service headquarters officials, no information is routinely collected on the number of referrals to DEA. Officials estimated that there were 20 to 25 cases a year for the entire Park Service, and most of these were multi-jurisdictional cases that may have begun or ended far from federal land.

BLM: No information is routinely collected on referrals to DEA. However, according to BLM headquarters officials, DEA's assistance is rarely requested. During the last 5 years, officials could recall only two referrals to DEA.

DOI: According to law enforcement officials in the Department of the Interior, the Department enjoys an excellent working relationship with DEA. DEA has primary jurisdiction for major violations of controlled substance laws at interstate and international levels. DEA works with Interior agencies and state and local jurisdictions on many task forces and as a manager of national drug intelligence. DEA by practice does not routinely involve itself in the types of crimes typically found on lands administered by the Interior agencies.

Question 14: During the past 5 years, how many cases did DEA refuse to investigate that had been requested by the agency?

This information is not collected by the agencies. According to headquarters officials in each of the agencies, DEA rarely refuses to provide assistance if it is requested.

Question 15: At what level in each agency is the decision made to request the assistance of DEA?

Each of the agencies indicated that generally the decision to request the assistance of DEA would be made at the local level. The Chief of the U.S. Park Police, however, makes this decision for the Park Police.

Question 16: What is the pay scale of nonfederal law enforcement personnel who work in local and state agencies and who are located in the same general geographical area and patrol remote or similar types of areas?

None of the agencies maintains data on the pay scales of nonfederal law enforcement personnel. We contacted the National Sheriffs' Association and the National Association of Counties, which we thought may have collected information on this issue. These associations either did not maintain any information on nonfederal pay scales or the information was limited to only a few geographical areas. We were able to get Question 17: How many arrests are made by each agency each year and what is the breakdown by type of crime involved?

Tables I.12 and I.13 include data on the types of offenses—not arrests—that occurred on the lands administered by the four agencies. Information on arrests is provided in tables I.14, I.15, and I.16. (An offense means that a crime has occurred. An arrest generally means that someone has been identified as committing an offense.) The source of the data on offenses is the Department of the Interior's submission to the uniform crime report—a nationwide database of crime statistics compiled by the Department of Justice. According to law enforcement officials in the Department of the Interior, it is important to note that the crime statistics reported to the Department of Justice in the uniform crime report reflect only those crimes and incidents requested by the Department of Justice. They do not reflect the true nature of land management law enforcement, which primarily centers on resource-related crimes.

Notes:

1. Table shows the number of offenses reported by each agency in accordance with the federal uniform crime reporting system. Arrest and disposition of offense was not consistently available for all agencies.
2. Part I offenses include homicide/manslaughter, rape, robbery, aggravated assault, burglary, larceny/theft, motor vehicle theft, and arson.
3. Other than Part I offenses include simple assault, forgery/counterfeiting, fraud, embezzlement, stolen property, vandalism, weapons, prostitution/commercialized vice, sex offenses, gambling, driving while intoxicated, drunkenness/liquor laws, drug abuse, disorderly conduct, and resource violations. Not included are incidents classified as curfews and loitering, runaways, and suspicions.

^aData from the Forest Service not accumulated as Part I and other than Part I offenses. Forest Service's data were not readily available for 1992-95. Summary data for 1996 showed 3,481 offenses involving the U.S. Code (e.g., serious misdemeanors and felonies) and 118,596 petty offenses (e.g., careless driving, discharging firearm, use of firecrackers, alcohol violations, and violating permit use).

Definitions of terms used in this table:

An arrest is a physical apprehension and detention or the issuing of a violation notice. A citation (or violation notice) is the same as making an arrest in that they both suffice to subject an individual to the criminal justice system.

"Exceptional means" indicates that an offense has been cleared (or closed) by issuing a violation notice or by a variety of other means.

Notes:

1. Does not include violations from the Division of Refuges.
2. According to Fish and Wildlife officials, physical arrests (physically taking a subject into custody and booking that subject) are very rare within the Division of Law Enforcement. The vast majority of adjudicated violations involve forfeiture of collateral, grand jury indictment, or information filed by a U.S. attorney. The Service does not consider a notice of violation or forfeiture of collateral to be an arrest.

^aFY 1996 data are preliminary.

^bAdjudicated violations are defined as any violation for which an arrest was made, charges were filed, a notice of violation was issued under a forfeiture of collateral schedule, a civil notice of violation was issued, or forfeiture or abandonment proceedings against property were initiated.

ENCLOSURE I

ENCLOSURE I

In addition to the data on offenses provided in tables I.12 and I.13, each of the Interior agencies provided additional information on arrests and citations. This information is found in tables I.14, I.15, and I.16. We made no attempt to identify or reconcile any discrepancies in the data presented in tables I.12 and I.13 with the data in tables I.14, I.15, and I.16. Furthermore, because the agencies differ about what is considered to be an arrest, we asked each agency to provide the definition it used to develop its data.

Table I.14: Arrest and Citation Information from the Bureau of Land Management, 1994-1996

Year	Clearance action
	Citations	Arrests
1994	4,583	157
1995	4,077	178
1996	3,695	250
Total	12,355	585

Definitions of terms used in this table:

Clearance action: For law enforcement purposes, a "clearance" means that the agency has developed sufficient evidence to request a court of competent jurisdiction to formally charge an individual or individuals with the commission of a criminal act.

Citation: A charging instrument in a criminal case in which the defendant has an option to forfeit collateral (fine) or appear in court; the defendant is released on his or her own recognizance without being physically arrested.

Arrest: The defendant is physically taken into custody by an officer and transported and booked into a jail facility pending appearance before a magistrate and/or posting bail. In the case of an arrest, the charging instrument is normally a criminal complaint, information, or an indictment.

Source of data and definitions: the Bureau of Land Management.

Question 19: Specifically, in what areas of law enforcement do these agencies conduct law enforcement activities and what is the statutory authorization for each one of these activities and each one of these agencies?

Table I.18: Agencies' Areas of Law Enforcement

Law enforcement organization	Type of criminal violations investigated
Bureau of Land Management, Law Enforcement	The Bureau of Land Management, Law Enforcement, is responsible for the following types of violations as they relate to the protection of the public lands, their resources, and users of federal lands administered by the Bureau: archaeological resources, wild horses and burros, recreation use fees, cave resources, fish and wildlife, National Trails use, National Wild and Scenic Rivers use, grazing, unlawful enclosures, migratory birds, endangered species, bald and golden eagles, Native American graves, oil and gas leasing, minerals leasing, hazardous materials, clean water, property theft and vandalism, coal theft, timber theft and damage, wildland arson and fire prevention, survey interference, land fraud, hazardous devices, marijuana cultivation and drug labs, subsistence hunting in Alaska, motorized and off-road vehicle use, recreation restrictions, and various other land use restrictions.
U.S. Forest Service, Law Enforcement and Investigations	The U.S. Forest Service, Law Enforcement and Investigations, is responsible for investigating offenses against the United States that occur within or have a nexus to the National Forest System. The types of investigations and enforcement actions in which the Forest Service is involved include the following: minor misdemeanor offenses found in Title 36 of the Code of Federal Regulations and major crimes related to National Forest System lands, facilities, and activities found in Titles 18 and 21 U.S.C. Investigations involve wildlife fire/arson, timber theft, theft and/or destruction of archeological resources of a historical or prehistorical nature, destruction of resources, and contract fraud. Drug enforcement investigations are performed under the authority of the National Forest System Drug Control Act of 1986, as amended, to detect and prevent the cultivation and manufacturing of marijuana on National Forest System lands. Investigations also include other environmental and wildlife crimes, illegal occupancy of National Forest System lands, theft of natural resources, and threats and assaults against Forest Service employees.
